Dedication

To Mrs. Lutz and Mr. Volbert, we the class of 1964, dedicate this yearbook. It seems such a small tribute to pay on our part. As our class advisors, often have been the times they have rendered services, "above and beyond the call of duty." With their help and guidance, we as a class, have achieved many goals. To you Mrs. Lutz and Mr. Volbert, we the class of '64 say "thank-you" and may you remember us as we will always be remembering you.

This I believe: Seniors of 1964

I believe American youth have the basic qualities which will respond to the present urgency for increase in both excellence and quality of learning. If the future requires greater competence of the adult, as I believe it will, our faith is firm in the fact that today's children have the capacity and willingness to achieve this added skill and knowledge. Teachers and parents, however, must give them the vision, encouragement, and inspiration for their task. A climate for learning a vision of personal growth, a personal responsibility for our country, and a respect for education can and must be engineered.

Pupils, when given a reasonable choice, will take responsibilities for study and learning; and when given opportunity will reveal what they know and what they don't know. This is basic to good instruction.

Difficult tasks, when they are meaningful, are seldom shunned by young people.

The discipline of free men is difficult to attain but the schools of America are designed to achieve this end.

Because of greatly broadened horizons, children have capacities to learn beyond past generations. Travel, visual materials, television, and wider social relationships give school learning a broader base on which to build. Standards of academic achievement, therefore, can be extended.

Young people, like adults, however, need some time for themselves, and a chance to do what is not always adult dominated. To the pursuit of individual interests, as history clearly shows, may be attributed many of man's greatest achievements. Sometimes the guidance from within the student is more valid than that which comes from guidance specialists and adult wisdom. Creativity, imagination, and the urge to deviate must not be frozen by too rigid standards.

In conclusion, remember that children and youth will fail only if the adults first fail them.

HOBART R. HINKLE, Supt.

HARRY B. ASHBURN, Principal

Members of the Class of 1964:

Congratulations on reaching one of life's important milestones. I am confident that the events surrounding this time will become firmly entrenched in your memories as being among the happier and more significant for each of you.

As a class, you have left an indelible mark at Perry High. Your accomplishments have been many and varied, your shortcomings and failures have been few. It has been my personal pleasure both to observe and to work with you in the active and responsible leadership which you have exhibited on so many occasions.

It is with much pride, mixed with a tinge of regret, that I bid farewell to the Class of 1964. In parting, I feel that I can best advise you in the words of Polonius in "HAMLET". There he said: "This above all, to thine own self be true, And it must follow as the night the day Thou canst not then be false to any man."

Sincerest best wishes to each of you, and good luck for the future.
